

People with MS worldwide connected

For those interested the Internet offers new opportunities. A novel approach features <http://www.ms-gateway.com/> with its global and local websites. It provides a comprehensive source of information and news on the latest developments as well as a forum for exchanging knowledge and experience within the worldwide community of people living with MS. Some people with MS even mentioned that it was only after they shared thoughts and fears with others via this communication forum that they finally accepted their diagnosis of MS and came to terms with their condition.

Within the BETAPLUS® Programme, in many countries hotlines are established in which trained Betaferon® specialists quickly answer questions when needed. In addition in some countries an SMS service (BETAtext) is offered for people who want to be reminded of their regular injection time.
